

OPC EMPLOYEES ACHIEVE AN INCREDIBLE 10 YEARS WITH NO LOST TIME INJURIES

ORILLIA, Ontario – December 5, 2012

On November 15, 2012 the employees of Orillia Power Corporation achieved 10 years of working safely with no lost-time injuries.

“I’m very pleased at your dedication and the respect that you have for our safety program,” said Keith McAllister, President and CEO, to employees during a celebratory safety breakfast on December 5. “It is and must continue to be our number one priority in everything we do.”

OPC employees’ safe working practices are crucial to the success of this organization, as they must work in a variety of environments every day. For linemen working on high-tension power lines or operations staff working at the bottom of a turbine pit in a generating station, there is no room for error.

“It has taken everyone in this room to see us achieve this milestone,” McAllister said. “I challenge you to continue this record, and I’m confident that working together, we can. It’s a true testament to the success of our program.”
